

Rubáiyát of Omar Khayyám

Translated by
EDWARD FITZGERALD

Introduction by
LOUIS UNTERMAYER

Illustrated by
CORDON ROSS

JAICO PUBLISHING HOUSE
BOMBAY-CALCUTTA-NEW DELHI-MADRAS

WHEN he was born at Naishapur in Khorassan, some time during the latter half of the 11th century, he was called Ghiyáthuddin Abulfath Omar bin Ibráhim Al-Khayyámi. Reduced to its practical origins, the sonorous syllables indicated nothing more than that the child was the son of one Abraham, or Ibráhim, the tentmaker. The boy, familiarly known as Omar, seems to have followed his father's trade. From tent-making he graduated to science and mathematics, and in his day he was far better known as a mathematician and astronomer than as a poet. He wrote a standard work on algebra; he revised the astronomical tables; he prompted the Persian Sultan Malík-Shah to make a drastic reform of the calendar.

During the few intervals when he was free of his computations, Omar indulged himself in the pleasures of poetry. He celebrated two intoxicants: verse and the vine. Before he died in 1123 he had composed some five hundred epigrams in quatrains, or rubais, peculiar in rhyme and pungent in effect. The stanzas were, for the most part, independent; they embodied a terse and self-contained idea. But they were connected, if not unified, by a central philosophy: a vigorous, free-thinking hedonism, a casual but frank appeal to enjoy the pleasures of life without too much reflection.

For six centuries Omar's work was unknown to the western world. It remained for a secluded English country gentleman to establish the Persian poet-mathematician among the glories of literature. Edward FitzGerald was born in the village of Bredfield on March 31, 1809, into a well-to-do family. Educated at Trinity College, Cambridge, where he became a friend of Thackeray, FitzGerald did the leisurely studying and traveling which was expected of him, cultivated music and botany, and, even as a young man, was relieved when he was permitted to retire to the Suffolk countryside. There he settled himself quietly, devoted his days to his friends and his flowers, and led a pleasantly unproductive life until his late forties.

In his fiftieth year, FitzGerald published a little paper-bound pamphlet of translations which he called The Rubáiyát of Omar Khayyám. The Pamphlet was published anonymously; it attracted little attention. A year later, in 1860, the poets Swinburne and Rossetti discovered the poem. But, legend to the contrary, the work did not thereupon leap into popularity. Eight years passed before a second edition seemed advisable.

Suddenly the poem became a favorite; the care-free quatrains of the eleventh-century Persian were used as a challenge by the nineteenth-century undergraduates, repeated by rebellious lovers, and flung out as a credo by the men and women who were growing restless if not yet insurrectionary. There had always been an undercurrent of protest against the rigid moral earnestness of the period. The Rubáiyát served as a small but concentrated expression of the revolt against Victorian conventions, the prevailing smugness, the false acquiescence and hypocritical prudery. Religion had been confronted by science; noble ideals had come into conflict with practical necessity; roaring machinery was threatening to dispel the once persuasive "sweetness and light." The "message" of FitzGerald's Rubáiyát was something of a slogan and something of an escape; it turned imperial commercialism to an idealized paganism. Half-defiantly, half desperately the younger men and women made FitzGerald-Omar aogue. Perhaps the most quoted quatrain of the century was.

A Book of Verses underneath the Bough
A Jug of Wine, a Loaf of Bread—and Thou
Beside me singing in the Wilderness—
Oh, Wilderness were Paradise enow!

Here was an infectious panacea, half tonic, half opiate. It was not so much a compromise of values as a combination of desirables: an avoidance of ordinary existence and a participation in a richer, if somewhat unreal, life. This was the opposite of Mrs. Grundy's middle-class taboos; this was a very denial of negations. "Wine, woman, and song" were affirmed and glorified in a mounting paean of pleasure. A Persian

Ecclesiastes, through the medium of a staid English squire, assured a perplexed generation that all was vanity; that the glories of this world are better than Paradise to come; that it is wise to take the cash and let the credit go; that life is a meaningless game played by helpless pieces; that worldly ambitions turn into ashes; that in the end—an end which comes all too quickly—wine is a more trustworthy friend and a better comforter than all the philosophers.

Thrust into undesired notice by The Rubáiyát, FitzGerald attempted to live up to his reputation for a while. He published translations of the Agamemnon and the two Oedipus tragedies of Sophocles; he wrote a biography of Bernard Barton, his father-in-law and friend of Charles Lamb; he made a compilation of the homely verse of George Crabbe entitled Readings from Crabbe. But he was not designed to be an Eminent Victorian. He was, even among retired gentlemen, unusually reticent, "an idle fellow, one whose friendship were more like loves," and his wit was kept for private communications. It was not until the letters of "Old Fitz" were published that FitzGerald's personal charm was revealed. He sank back into semi-obscurity as though it were a comfortable couch, and died, almost a quarter of a century after the publication of The Rubáiyát, on June 14, 1883. His end was characteristically calm. He slipped from life painlessly, almost imperceptibly.

Appreciation of Omar-FitzGerald continued to grow. Tennyson wrote a reminiscent poem lauding the "golden Eastern lay" of "that large infidel, your Omar," and hoping that FitzGerald would welcome the verses not so much for their own sake as a tribute from

. . . one recalling gracious times,
When, in our younger London days,
You found some merit in my rhymes,
And I more pleasure in your praise.

The Persian poem which seven centuries had neglected came to life as a permanent part of English literature. Elihu Vedder emphasized, and even overstressed, its allegorical implications with his famous symbolic drawings. Translations appeared in German, Italian, French, Danish, and Hungarian. Liza Lehmann's song cycle In a Persian Garden was a performer's show-piece and a popular favorite at the turn of the century. Omar became a cult; commentators placed him at the head of a "literature of agnosticism." The quatrains were enthusiastically, if inconsistently, compared to the choruses in the Greek dramas, the hopeless outcries of Job, and the irresponsible drinking-songs of Anacreon. It is said that when Thomas Hardy lay dying in his eighty-eighth year, he asked to have one particular stanza read to him. It was the verse which runs:

O Thou, who Man of baser Earth didst make,
And ev'n with Paradise devise the Snake:

For all the Sin wherewith the Face of Man
Is blackened—Man's forgiveness give—and take!

No longer dependent upon the vagaries of a period or the tricks of fashion, The Rubáiyát has outlived cults and commentaries. It has had its influences and imitators. Its spirit is reflected in Housman's A Shropshire Lad, in which fortitude and fatalism are pitted against each other and finally reconciled. Omar might well have applauded the Shropshire lad's conclusion that

. . . malt does more than Milton can
To justify God's way to man—

And he would have smiled at Housman's summary in his Last Poems:

The troubles of our proud and angry dust
Are from eternity, and shall not fail.

Bear them we can, and if we can we must.

Shoulder the sky, my lad, and drink your ale.

But the grim philosophy scarcely matters. The cynicism may be persistent; the mood may be (as FitzGerald himself said) "a desperate sort of thing, at the bottom of all thinking men's minds." But the tune is so gay that even the pessimism seems blithe. The quick but melodic turns of the poem "tease us out of thought." We may argue about the meaning, but we are indisputably compelled and even convinced by the music.

—LOUIS UNTERMAYER

Elizabethtown
Adirondack Mountains
New York

RUBÁIYÁT OF
OMAR KHAYYÁM

Edward FitzGerald's First Version

Awake! for Morning in the Bowl of Night
 Has flung the Stone that puts the Stars to Flight:
 And Lo! the Hunter of the East has caught
 The Sultân's Turret in a Noose of Light.

Stone—Flinging a stone into a cup was the desert signal for
 "To horse!"

Dreaming when Dawn's Left Hand was in the Sky
 I heard a Voice within the Tavern cry,
 "Awake, my Little ones, and fill the Cup
 Before Life's Liquor in its Cup be dry."

Dawn's Left Hand—False dawn, a nebulous light on the horizon about an hour before dawn.

III

And, as the Cock crew, those who stood before/
The Tavern shouted—"Open then the Door.

You know how little while we have to stay,

IV

Now the New Year reviving old Desires,
The thoughtful Soul to Solitude retires,
Where the WHITE HAND OF MOSES on the Bough
Puts out, and Jesus from the Ground suspires.

New Year—The New Year is here conceived, as in most old calendars, as beginning at the vernal equinox (March 21).
White Hand of Moses—In the Koran Moses draws forth his hand and it becomes magically white; and thus the bough whitens with blossoms perhaps.
Jesus—According to Persians, Jesus' breath had healing power.

Irām indeed is gone with all its Rose,
And Jamshýd's Sev'n-ring'd Cup where no one knows;

But still the Vine her ancient Ruby yields,
And still a Garden by the Water blows.

Irām—A sumptuous city now buried somewhere beneath the sands of Arabia.

Jamshýd—A legendary Persian king; his was a golden divining cup whose seven rings symbolized the seven heavens, seven planets, seven seas, and which contained the elixir of life.

VI

And David's Lips are lock't; but in divine
 High piping Pélevi, with "Wine! Wine! Wine!
Red Wine!"—the Nightingale cries to the Rose
 That yellow Cheek of hers to incarnadine.

David—He is mentioned in the Koran as a singer and is, of course, the Psalmist of the Bible; therefore, David's lips is an apt figure here.

Pélevi—An old Persian language.

VII

Come, fill the Cup, and in the Fire of Spring
The Winter Garment of Repentance fling:

 The Bird of Time has but a little way
To fly—and Lo! The Bird is on the Wing.

VIII

And look—a thousand Blossoms with the Day
Woke—and a thousand scatter'd into Clay:

And this first Summer Month that brings the Rose

Shall take Jamshýd and Kaikobád away.

Kaikobád—A semihistorical Persian warrior-king.

IX

But come with old Khayyám, and leave the Lot
Of Kaikobád and Kaikhosrú forgot:

Let Rustum lay about him as he will,
Or Hátim Tai cry Supper—heed them not.

Kaikhosrú—A legendary Persian king.

Rustam—A legendary Persian warrior, noted for his great exploits.

Hátim Tai—A Mohammedan poet renowned for his open-handed generosity.

With me along some Strip of Herbage strown
That just divides the desert from the sown,
Where name of Slave and Sultán scarce is known,
And pity Sultán Máhmúd on his Throne.

Máhmúd—Sultán of Ghazni (971P-1029), a Mohammedan conqueror. His realms lay in present-day Afghanistan.

F-338
1344

Here with a Loaf of Bread beneath the Bough,
 A Flask of Wine, a Book of Verse—and Thou
 Beside me singing in the Wilderness—
 And Wilderness is Paradise enow.

XII

“How sweet is mortal Sovranty!”—think some:
Others—“How blest the Paradise to come!”

Ah, take the Cash in hand and waive the Rest;
Oh, the brave Music of a distant Drum!

Cash—Present experiences.
Rest—The future.

XIII

Look to the Rose that blows about us—"Lo,
Laughing," she says, "into the World I blow:

At once the silken Tassel of my Purse
Tear, and its Treasure on the Garden throw."

Silken Tassel—The golden center of the rose.

The Worldly Hope men set their Hearts upon
Turns Ashes—or it prospers; and anon,

Like Snow upon the Desert's dusty Face
Lighting a little Hour or two—is gone.

And those who husbanded the Golden Grain,
And those who flung it to the Winds like Rain,
Alike to no such aureate Earth are turn'd
As, buried once, Men want dug up again.

Think, in this batter'd Caravanserai
Whose Doorways are alternate Night and Day,
How Sultán after Sultán with his Pomp
Abode his Hour or two, and went his way.

Think, in this batter'd Caravanserai
Whose Doorways are alternate Night and Day,
How Sultán after Sultán with his Pomp
Abode his Hour or two, and went his way.

They say the Lion and the Lizard keep
 The Courts where Jamshýd gloried and drank deep:

And Bahrám, that great Hunter—the Wild Ass
 Stamps o'er his Head, and he lies fast asleep.

Courts—The Throne of Jamshyd, the limestone platform of the main palace of Persepolis.

Bahrám—A Persian king of the Sassanian dynasty who perished in a bog while pursuing his favorite quarry, a wild ass.

I sometimes think that never blows so red
The Rose as where some buried Cæsar bled;
That every Hyacinth the Garden wears
Dropt in its Lap from some once lovely Head.

And this delightful Herb whose tender Green
Fledge's the River's Lip on which we lean—

Ah, lean upon it lightly! for who knows
From what once lovely Lip it springs unseen!

Ah! my Belovéd, fill the Cup that clears
To-DAY of past Regrets and future Fears—
To-morrow?—Why, To-morrow I may be
Myself with Yesterday's Sev'n Thousand Years.

Sev'n Thousand Years—A thousand years to each of the seven planets.

Lo! some we loved, the loveliest and the best
 That Time and Fate of all their Vintage prest,
 Have drunk their Cup a Round or two before,
 And one by one crept silently to Rest.

And we, that now make merry in the Room
They left, and Summer dresses in new Bloom,
Ourselves must we beneath the Couch of Earth
Descend, ourselves to make a Couch—for whom?

Ah, make the most of what we yet may spend,
Before we too into the Dust Descend;
Dust into Dust, and under Dust, to lie,
Sans Wine, sans Song, sans Singer and—sans End!

Alike for those who for TO-DAY prepare,
And those that after a TO-MORROW stare,

A Muezzín from the Tower of Darkness cries
"Fools! your Reward is neither Here nor There."

Muezzín—A Mohammedan who cries the hour of prayer.

Why, all the Saints and Sages who discuss'd
Of the Two Worlds so learnedly, are thrust
Like foolish Prophets forth; their Words to Scorn
Are scatter'd, and their Mouths are stopt with Dust.

Oh, come with old Khayyám, and leave the Wise
To talk; one thing is certain, that Life flies;

One thing is certain, and the Rest is Lies;
The Flower that once has blown for ever dies.

With them the Seed of Wisdom did I sow,
And with my own hand labour'd it to grow:
And this was all the Harvest that I reap'd—
"I came like Water, and like Wind I go."

Into this Universe, and why not knowing.
Nor whence, like Water willy-nilly flowing:
And out of it, as Wind along the Waste,
I know not whither, willy-nilly blowing.

What, without asking, hither hurried whence?
And, without asking, whither hurried hence!
Another and another Cup to drown
The Memory of this Impertinence!

Up from Earth's Centre through the seventh Gate
 I rose, and on the Throne of Saturn sate,
 And many Knots unravel'd by the Road;
 But not the Knot of Human Death and Fate.

Saturn—The lord of the seventh heaven. In medieval learning the seven heavens represented the seven liberal arts; therefore, Omar has used all the arts in attempts to solve the riddle of the universe.

There was a Door to which I found no Key:
There was a Veil past which I could not see:
Some little Talk awhile of ME and THEE
There seemed—and then no more of THEE and ME.

Me and Thee—That is to say, distinct personalities as differentiated from the depersonalized whole of existence.

Then to the rolling Heav'n itself I cried,
Asking, "What Lamp had Destiny to guide
Her little Children stumbling in the Dark?"
And—"A blind understanding!" Heav'n replied.

Then to this earthen Bowl did I adjourn
My Lip the secret Well of Life to learn:

And Lip to Lip it murmur'd—"While you live,
Drink!—for once dead you never shall return."

I think the Vessel, that with fugitive
Articulation answer'd, once did live,
And merry-make; and the cold Lip I kiss'd
How many Kisses might it take—and give.

For in the Market-place, one Dusk of Day,
I watch'd the Potter thumping his wet Clay:
And with its all obliterated Tongue
It murmur'd—"Gently, Brother, gently, pray!"

For in the Market-place, one Dusk of Day,
I watch'd the Potter thumping his wet Clay:
And with its all obliterated Tongue
It murmur'd—"Gently, Brother, gently, pray!"

Ah, fill the Cup:—what boots it to repeat
How Time is slipping underneath our Feet:
Unborn To-MORROW and dead YESTERDAY,
Why fret about them if To-DAY be sweet!

One Moment in Annihilation's Waste,
One Moment, of the Well of Life to taste—
The Stars are setting; and the Caravan
Starts for the dawn of Nothing—Oh, make haste!

How long, how long, in infinite Pursuit
Of This and That endeavour and dispute?

Better be merry with the fruitful Grape
Than sadden after none, or bitter, Fruit.

You know, my Friends, how long since in my House

For a new Marriage I did make Carouse:

Divorced old barren Reason from my Bed,
And took the Daughter of the Vine to Spouse.

You know, my Friends, how long since
House

For a new Marriage I did make Caro
Divorced old barren Reason from n
And took the Daughter of the Vine to

For "Is" and "Is-NOT" though with Rule and Line,
And, "UP-AND-DOWN without, I could define,
I yet in all-I only cared to know,
Was never deep in anything but—Wine.

And lately, by the Tavern Door agape,
Came stealing through the Dusk an Angel Sha
 Bearing a vessel on his Shoulder; and
He bid me taste of it; and 'twas—the Grapel

Angel Shape—Azrael, the angel of death, who watches over the dying, and separates the soul from the body.

The Grape that can with Logic absolute
 The Two-and-Seventy jarring Sects confute
 The subtle Alchemist that in a Trice
 Life's leaden Metal into Gold transmute.

Two-and-Seventy Sects—The world was said to be made up of seventy-two religions.

The mighty Mahmúd, the victorious Lord,
That all the misbelieving and black Horde
Of Fears and Sorrows that infest the Soul
Scatters and slays with his enchanted Sword.

Mahmúd—This alludes to the Sultán's conquest of India and its dark-skinned people.

But leave the Wise to wrangle, and with me
The Quarrel of the Universe let be:

And, in some corner of the Hubbub coucht,
Make Game of that which makes as much of Thee,

For in and out, above, about, below,
'Tis nothing but a Magic Shadow-show,
Play'd in a Box whose Candle is the Sun,
Round which we Phantom Figures come and go.

Magic Shadow-show—A magic lantern composed of a cylinder, on whose inside are painted figures, which revolves around a lighted candle.

And if the Wine you drink, the Lip you press,
 End in the Nothing all Things end in—Yes—
 Then fancy while Thou art, Thou art but what
 Thou shalt be—Nothing—Thou shalt not be less.

While the Rose blows along the River Brink,
With old Khayyám the Ruby Vintage drink:

And when the Angel with his darker Draught
Draws up to thee—take that, and do not shrink.

Tis all a Chequer-board of Nights and Days
Where Destiny with Men for Pieces plays:
Hither and thither moves, and mates, and slays
And one by one back in the Closet lays.

Chequer-board—Used in the game of chess, which originated in the East.

The Ball no Question makes of Ayes and Noes,
 But Right or Left as strikes the Player goes;
 And He that toss'd Thee down into the Field,
 He knows about it all—He knows—HE !—

Ball—Used in polo; which game also originated in the East.

The Moving Finger writes; and, having writ,
Moves on: nor all thy Piety nor Wit
Shall lure it back to cancel half a Line,
Nor all thy Tears wash out a Word of it.

And that inverted Bowl we call The Sky,
Whereunder crawling coop't we live and die,
Lift not thy hands to It for help—for It
Rolls impotently on as Thou or I.

With Earth's first Clay They did the Last Man's knead,
And then of the Last Harvest sow'd the Seed:
 Yea, the first Morning of Creation wrote
What the Last Dawn of Reckoning shall read.

The Vine had struck a Fibre; which about
It clings my Being—let the Súfi flout;
Of my Base Metal may be filed a Key,
That shall unlock the Door he howls without

Oh Thou, who Man of baser Earth didst make,
And who with Eden didst devise the Snake;
For all the Sin wherewith the Face of Man
Is blacken'd, Man's Forgiveness give—and take!

KUZA NÁMA

Listen again. One Evening at the Close
 Of Ramazán, ere the better Moon arose,
 In that old Potter's Shop I stood alone
 With the clay Population round in Rows.

Kúza Náma—"The Book of Pots."

Ramazán—The ninth month of the Mohammedan calendar, a time of strict fasting from dawn to sunset

Better Moon—The new moon.

And strange to tell, among that Earthen Lot
Some could articulate, while others not:

And suddenly one more impatient cried—
“Who is the Potter, pray, and who the Pot?”

人 王

卷之四

Then said another—"Surely not in vain
My substance from the common Earth was ta'en,
That He who subtly wrought me into Shape
Should stamp me back to common Earth again."

Another said—"Why, ne'er a peevish Boy
 Would break the Bowl from which he drank i
 Joy;

Shall He that made the Vessel in pure Love
 And Fanny, in an after Rage destroy!"

None answer'd this; but after Silence spake
A Vessel of a more ungainly Make:

“They sneer at me for leaning all awry;
What? did the Hand then of the Potter shake?”

Said one—"Folks of a surly Tapster tell,
And daub his Visage with the Smoke of Hell;
They talk of some strict Testing of us—Pish!
He's a Good Fellow, and 'twill all be well."

Then said another with a long-drawn Sigh,
"My Clay with long oblivion is gone dry:
But, fill me with the old familiar Juice,
Methinks I might recover by-and-byel"

So, while the Vessels one by one were speaking,
 One spied the little Crescent all were seeking:

And then they jogg'd each other, "Brother!
 Brother!

Hark to the Porter's Shoulder-knot a-creaking!"

• • • • •

Crescent—The moon in its last quarter, nearing the end of the month of fasting.

Porter's shoulder-knot—A shoulder pad used for carrying heavy loads—here, for bringing up wine after the fast.

Ah, with the Grape my fading Life provide,
 And wash my Body whence the life has died,
 And in a Windingsheet of Vineleaf wrapt,
 So bury me by some sweet Gardenside.

That ev'n my buried Ashes such a Snare
Of Perfume shall fling up into the Air,

As not a True Believer passing by
But shall be overtaken unaware.

True Believer—That is to say, a Mohammedan.

Indeed, the Idols I have loved so long
Have done my Credit in Men's Eye much wrong:
Have drown'd my Honour in a shallow Cup,
And sold my Reputation for a Song.

Indeed, indeed, Repentance oft before
I swore—but was I sober when I swore?
And then and then came Spring, and Rose-in-hand
My thread-bare Penitence a-pieces tore,

And much as Wine has play'd the Infidel,
And robb'd me of my Robe of Honour—well.
I often wonder what the Vintners buy
One half so precious as the Goods they sell.

Alas, that Spring should vanish with the Rose!
That Youth's sweet-scented Manuscript should close!

The Nightingale that in the Branches sang,
Ah, whence, and whither flown again, who knows!

Ah, Lovel could thou and I with Fate conspire
To grasp this sorry Scheme of Things entire,
Would not we shatter it to bits—and then
Re-mould it nearer to the Heart's Desire!

Ah, Moon of my Delight who know'st no wane;
The Moon of Heav'n is rising once again:
How oft hereafter rising shall she look
Through this same Garden after me—in vain!

And when Thyself with shining Foot shall pass
 Among the Guests Star-scatter'd on The Grass,
 And in Thy joyous Errand reach the Spot
 Where I made one—turn down an empty Glass!

TAMAM SHUD

Tamám Shud—It is completed.

RUBAIYAT
OF
OMAR KHAYYAM

THE FIFTH AND LAST EDITION
OF THE FITZGERALD TRANSLATION

I

WAKE! For the Sun, who scatter'd into flight
The Stars before him from the Field of Night,
Drives Night along with them from Heav'n, and strikes
The Sultán's Turret with a Shaft of Light.

II

Before the phantom of False morning died,
Methought a Voice within the Tavern cried,
"When all the Temple is prepared within,
"Why nods the drowsy Worshipper outside?"

III

And, as the Cock crew, those who stood before
The Tavern shouted—"Open then the Door!
"You know how little while we have to stay,
And, once departed, may return no more."

IV

From the New Year reviving old Desires,
The thoughtful Soul to Solitude retires,
Where the White Hand of Mosses on the Box
Puts out, and Jesus from the Ground suspires.

V

Iram indeed is gone with all his Rose,
And Jamshyd's Sev'n-ring'd Cup where no one know:
But still a Ruby kindles in the Vine,
And many a Garden by the Water blows.

VI

And David's lips are lockt; but in divine
High-piping Pehlevi, with "Wine! Wine! Wine!
"Red Wine!"—the Nightingale cries to the Rose
at fallow cheek of hers to' incarnadine.

VII

Come, fill the Cup, and in the fire of Spring
Your Winter garment of Repentance fling:
The Bird of Time has but a little way
To flutter—and the Bird is on the Wing.

Whether at Naishápúr or Babylon,
 Whether the Cup with sweet or bitter run,
 The Wine of Life keeps oozing drop by drop,
 The Leaves of Life keep falling one by one.

IX

Each Morn a thousand Roses brings, you say:
 Yes, but where leaves the Rose of Yesterday?
 And this first Summer month that brings the Rose
 Shall take Jamshyd and Kaikobád away.

X

Well, let it take them! What have we to do
 With Kaikobád the Great, or Kaikhosrú?
 Let Zál and Rustum bluster as they will,
 Or Hátim call to Supper—heed not you.

XI

With me along the strip of Herbage strown
 That just divides the desert from the sown,
 Where name of Slave and Sultán is forgot—
 And Peace to Mahmúd on his golden Throne!

A Book of Verses underneath the Bough,
 A Jug of Wine, a Loaf of Bread—and Thou
 Beside me singing in the Wilderness—
 Oh, Wilderness were Paradise enow!

Some for the Glories of This World; and some Sigh for the Prophet's Paradise to come;
 Ah, take the Cash, and let the Credit go,
 Nor heed the rumble of a distant Drum!

Look to the blowing Rose about us—"Lo,
 Laughing," she says, "into the world I blow,
 At once the silken tassel of my Purse
 Tear, and its Treasure on the Garden throw."

And those who husbanded the Golden grain,
 And those who flung it to the winds like Rain.
 Alike to no such aureate Earth are turn'd
 As, buried once, Men want dug up again.

The Worldly Hope men set their Hearts upon
Turns Ashes—or it prospers; and anon,

Like Snow upon the Desert's dusty Face,
Lighting a little hour or two—is gone.

Think, in this batter'd Caravanserai -
Whose Portals are alternate Night and Day,
How Sultán after Sultán with his Pomp
Abode his destined Hour, and went his way.

They say the Lion and the Lizard keep
The courts where Jamshyd gloried and drank deep;
And Bahrá'm, the great Hunter—the Wild Ass
Stamps o'er his Head, but cannot break his Sleep.

I sometimes think that never blows so red
The Rose as where some buried Cæsar bled;
That every Hyacinth the Garden wears
Dropt in her Lap from some once lovely Hero.

And this reviving Herb whose tender Green
 Fledges the River-Lip on which we lean—
 Ah, lean upon it lightly! for who knows
 From what once lovely Lip it springs unseen!

XXI

Ah, my Belovéd, fill the Cup that clears
 To-day of past Regrets and future Fears:
To-morrow—Why, To-morrow I may be
 Myself with Yesterday's Sev'n thousand Years.

XXII

or some we loved, the loveliest and the best
 That from his Vintage rolling Time hath prest,
 Have drunk their Cup a Round or two before,
 And one by one crept silently to rest.

XXIII

And we, that now make merry in the Room
 They left, and Summer dresses in new bloom,
 Ourselves must we beneath the Couch of Earth
 Descend—ourselves to make a Couch—for whom?

Ah, make the most of what we yet may spend,
 Before we too into the Dust descend;
 Dust into Dust, and under Dust to lie,
 Sans Wine, sans Song, sans Singer, and—sans End!

Alike for those who for To-day prepare,
 And those that after some To-morrow stare,
 A Muezzín from the Tower of Darkness cries,
 "Fools! your Reward is neither Here nor There."

Why, all the Saints and Sages who discuss'd
 Of the Two Worlds so wisely—they are thrust
 Like foolish Prophets forth; their Words to Scorn
 Are scatter'd, and their Mouths are stopt with Dust.

Myself when young did eagerly frequent
 Doctor and Saint, and heard great argument
 About it and about: but evermore
 Came out by the same door where in I went

With them the seed of Wisdom did I sow,
 And with mine own hand wrought to make it grow;
 And this was all the Harvest that I reap'd—
 "I came like Water, and like Wind I go."

XXIX

Into this Universe, and Why not knowing
 Nor Whence, like Water willy-nilly flowing;
 And out of it, as Wind along the Waste,
 I know not Whither, willy-nilly blowing.

XXX

What, without asking, hither hurried Whence?
 And, without asking, Whither hurried hence!
 Oh, many a Cup of this forbidden Wine
 Must drown the memory of that insolence!

XXXI

Up from Earth's Center through the Seventh Gate
 I rose, and on the Throne of Saturn sate,
 And many a Knot unravel'd by the Road;
 But not the Master-knot of Human Fate.

There was the Door to which I found no Key;
 There was the Veil through which I might not see—
 Some little talk awhile of ME and THEE
 There was—and then no more of THEE and ME.

Earth could not answer; nor the Seas that mourn
 In flowing Purple, of their Lord Forlorn;
 Nor rolling Heaven, with all his Signs reveal'd
 And hidden by the sleeve of Night and Morn.

Then of the THEE IN ME who works behind
 The Veil, I lifted up my hands to find
 A lamp amid the Darkness; and I heard,
 As from Without—"THE ME WITHIN THEE BLIND!"

Then to the Lip of this poor earthen Urn
 I lean'd, the Secret of my Life to learn.
 And Lip to Lip it murmur'd—"While you live,
 "Drink!—for, once dead, you never shall return."

I think the Vessel, that with fugitive
 Articulation answer'd, once did live,
 And drink; and Ah! the passive Lip I kiss'd;
 How many Kisses might it take—and give!

XXXVII

For I remember stopping by the way
 To watch a Potter thumping his wet Clay:
 And with its all-obliterated Tongue
 It murmur'd—"Gently, Brother, gently, pray!"

XXXVIII

And has not such a Story from of Old
 Down Man's successive generations roll'd
 Of such a clod of saturated Earth
 Cast by the Maker into Human mold?

XXXIX

And not a drop that from our Cups we throw
 For Earth to drink of, but may steal below
 To quench the fire of Anguish in some Eye
 There hidden—far beneath, and long ago.

As then the Tulip for her morning sup
 Of Heav'nly Vintage from the soil looks up,
 Do you devoutly do the like, till Heav'n
 To Earth invert you—like an empty Cup.

XLI

Perplexed no more with Human or Divine,
 To-morrow's tangle to the winds resign,
 And lose your fingers in the tresses of
 The Cypress-slender Minister of Wine.

XLII

And if the Wine you drink, the Lip you press,
 End in what All begins and ends in—Yes;
 Think then you are TO-DAY what YESTERDAY
 You were—To-MORROW you shall not be less.

XLIII

So when that Angel of the darker Drink
 At last shall find you by the river-brink,
 And, offering his Cup, invite your Soul
 Forth to your Lips to quaff—you shall not shrink.

Why, if the Soul can fling the Dust aside,
And naked on the Air of Heaven ride,

Were't not a Shame—were't not a Shame for him
In this clay carcass crippled to abide?

'Tis but a Tent where takes his one day's rest
A Sultán to the realm of Death addrest;

The Sultán rises, and the dark Ferrash
Strikes, and prepares it for another Guest.

not lest Existence closing your
, and mine, should know the like no more;
Eternal Sáki from that Bowl has pour'd ions of Bubbles like us, and will pour.

When You and I behind the Veil are past,
Oh, but the long, long while the World shall last,
Which of our Coming and Departure heeds
As the Sea's self should heed a pebble-cast.

A Moment's Halt—a momentary taste
 Of BEING from the Well amid the Waste—
 And Lo!—the phantom Caravan has reach'd
 The NOTHING it set out from—Oh, make haste!

Would you that spangle of Existence spend
 About THE SECRET—quick about it, Friend!
 A Hair perhaps divides the False from True—
 And upon what, prithee, may life depend?

A Hair perhaps divides the false and True;
 Yes; and a single Alif were the clue—
 Could you but find it—to the Treasure-house,
 And peradventure to THE MASTER too;

Whose secret Presence through Creation's veins.
 Running Quicksilver-like eludes your pains;
 Taking all shapes from Máh to Máhi and
 They change and perish all—but He remain

A moment guessed—then back behind the Fold
 Immerst of Darkness round the Drama roll'd
 Which, for the Pastime of Eternity,
 He doth Himself contrive, enact, behold.

But if in vain, down on the stubborn floor
 Of Earth, and up to Heav'n's unopening Door,
 You gaze TO-DAY, while You are You—how then
 TO-MORROW, when You shall be You no more?

Be not your Hour, nor in the vain pursuit
 This and That endeavor and dispute;
 Better be jocund with the fruitful Grape
 Than sadden after none, or bitter, Fruit.

You know, my Friends, with what a brave Carouse
 I made a Second Marriage in my house;
 Divorced old barren Reason from my Bed,
 And took the Daughter of the Vine to Spouse.

For "Is" and "Is-not" though with Rule and Line
 And "UP-AND-DOWN" by Logic I define,
 Of all that one should care to fathom, I
 Was never deep in anything but—Wine.

Ah, by my Computations, People say,
 Reduce the Year to better reckoning?—Nay,
 'Twas only striking from the Calendar
 Unborn To-morrow and dead Yesterday.

And lately, by the Tavern Door agape,
 Came shining through the Dusk an Angel Shape
 Bearing a Vessel on his Shoulder; and
 He bid me taste of it; and 'twas—the Grapel

The Grape that can with Logic absolute
 The Two-and-Seventy jarring Sects confute;
 The sovereign Alchemist that in a trice
 Life's leaden metal into Gold transmute;

The mighty Mahmúd, Allah-breathing Lord,
 That all the misbelieving and black Horde
 Of Fears and Sorrows that infest the Soul
 Scatters before him with his whirlwind Sword.

Why, be this Juice the growth of God, who dare
 Blaspheme the twisted tendril as a Snare?
 A Blessing, we should use it, should we not?
 And if a Curse—why, then, Who set it there?

I must abjure the Balm of Life, I must,
 Scared by some After-reckoning ta'en on trust,
 Or lured with Hope of some Diviner Drink,
 To fill the Cup—when crumbled into Dust!

Of threats of Hell and Hopes of Paradise!
 One thing at least is certain—This Life flies;
 One thing is certain and the rest is Lies;
 The Flower that once has blown for ever dies.

Strange, is it not? that of the myriads who
 Before us pass'd the door of Darkness through,
 Not one returns to tell us of the Road,
 Which to discover we must travel too.

The Revelations of Devout and Learn'd
 Who rose before us, and as Prophets burn'd,
 Are all but Stories, which, awake from Sleep
 They told their comrades, and to Sleep return'd

I sent my Soul through the Invisible,
 Some letter of that After-life to spell:
 And by and by my Soul return'd to me,
 And answer'd "I Myself am Heav'n and Hell:"

Heav'n but the Vision of fulfill'd Desire,
 And Hell the Shadow from a Soul on fire,
 Cast on the Darkness into which Ourselves,
 So late emerged from, shall so soon expire.

We are no other than a moving row
 Of Magic Shadow-shapes that come and go
 Round with the Sun-illumin'd Lantern field
 In Midnight by the Master of the Show;

LXIX

But helpless Pieces of the Game He plays
 Upon this Chequer-board of Nights and Days;
 Hither and thither moves, and checks, and slays,
 And one by one back in the Closet lays.

LXX

The Ball no question makes of Ayes and Noes,
 But Here or There as strikes the Player goes;
 And He that toss'd you down into the Field,
He knows about it all—HE knows—HE knows!

LXXI

The Moving Finger writes; and, having writ,
 Moves on: nor all your Piety nor Wit
 Shall lure it back to cancel half a Line,
 Nor all your Tears wash out a Word of it.

LXXII

And that inverted Bowl they call the Sky,
 Whereunder crawling coop'd we live and die,
 Lift not your hands to It for help—for It
 As impotently moves as you or I.

LXXIII

With Earth's first Clay They did the Last Man knead
 And there of the Last Harvest sow'd the Seed:
 And the first Morning of Creation wrote
 What the Last Dawn of Reckoning shall read.

LXXIV

YESTERDAY This Day's Madness did prepare;
 TO-MORROW'S Silence, Triumph, or Despair:
 Drink! for you know not whence you came, no
 why:
 Drink! for you know not why you go nor where.

LXXV

I tell you this—When, started from the Goal,
 Over the flaming shoulders of the Foal
 Of Heav'n Parwān and Mushtari they flung,
 In my predestined Plot of Dust and Soul

The Vine had struck a fiber: which about
 It clings my Being—let the Dervish flout;
 Of my Base metal may be filed a Key
 That shall unlock the Door he howls without.

And this I know: whether the one True Light
 Kindle to Love, or Wrath-consume me quite,
 One Flash of It within the Tavern caught
 Better than in the Temple lost outright.

What! out of senseless Nothing to provoke
 A conscious Something to resent the yoke
 Of unpermitted Pleasure, under pain
 Of Everlasting Penalties, if broke!

What! from his helpless Creature be repaid
 Pure Gold for what he lent him dross-allay'd—
 Sue for a Debt he never did contract,
 And cannot answer—Oh the sorry trade!

Oh Thou, who didst with pitfall and with gin
Beset the Road I was to wander in,

Thou wilt not with Predestined Evil round
Enmesh, and then impute my Fall to Sin!

Oh Thou, who Man of baser Earth didst make,
And ev'n with Paradise devise the Snake:

For all the Sin wherewith the Face of Man
Is blacken'd—Man's forgiveness give—and take!

• • • • •

As under cover of departing Day
Slunk hunger-stricken Ramazán away,

Once more within the Potter's house alone
I stood, surrounded by the Shapes of Clay.

Shapes of all Sorts and Sizes, great and small,
That stood along the floor and by the wall;

And some loquacious Vessels were; and some
Listen'd perhaps, but never talk'd at all.

Said one among them—"Surely not in vain
 My substance of the common Earth was ta'en
 And to this Figure molded, to be broke,
 Or trampled back to shapeless Earth again."

LXXXV

Then said a Second—"Ne'er a peevish Boy
 Would break the Bowl from which he drank in joy
 And He that with his hand the Vessel made
 Will surely not in after Wrath destroy."

LXXXVI

After a momentary silence spake
 Vessel of a more ungainly Make;
 "They sneer at me for leaning all awry:
 What! did the Hand then of the Potter shake?"

LXXXVII

Whereat some one of the loquacious Lot—
 I think a Súfi pipkin—waxing hot—
 "All this of Pot and Potter—Tell me then,
 Who is the Potter, pray, and who the Pot?"

"Why," said another, "Some there are who tell
 Of one who threatens he will toss to Hell
 The luckless Pots he marr'd in making—Pish!
 He's a Good Fellow, and 'twill all be well."

"Well," murmured one, "Let whoso make or buy,
 My Clay with long Oblivion is gone dry:
 But fill me with the old familiar Juice,
 Methinks I might recover by and by."

So while the Vessels one by one were speaking,
 The little Moon look'd in that all were seeking:
 And then they jogg'd each other, "Brother! Brother!
 Now for the Porter's shoulder-knot a-creaking!"

• • • • •

Ah, with the Grape my fading life provide,
 And wash the Body whence the Life has died,
 And lay me, shrouded in the living Leaf,
 By some not unfrequented Garden-side.

XCV

That ev'n buried Ashes such a snare
Of Vintage shall fling up into the Air
As not a True-believer passing by
But shall be overtaken unaware.

XCVI

Indeed the Idols I have loved so long
Have done my credit in this World much wrong:
Have drown'd my Glory in a shallow Cup,
And sold my reputation for a Song.

XCVII

Indeed, indeed, Repentance oft before
I swore—but was I sober when I swore?
And then and then came Spring, and Rose-in-hand
My thread-bare Penitence apieces tore.

XCVIII

And much as Wine has play'd the Infidel,
And robb'd me of my Robe of Honor—Well,
I wonder often what the Vintners buy
One half so precious as the stuff they sell.

Yet Ah, that Spring should vanish with the Rose!
 That Youth's sweet-scented manuscript should close!
 The Nightingale that in the branches sang,
 Ah whence, and whither flown again, who knows!

XCVII

Would but the Desert of the Fountain yield
 One glimpse—if dimly, yet indeed, reveal'd,
 To which the fainting Traveler might spring,
 As springs the trampled herbage of the field!

XCVIII

Would but some winged Angel ere too late
 Arrest the yet unfolded Roll of Fate,
 And make the stern Recorder otherwise
 Enregister, or quite obliterate!

XCIX

Ah Love! could you and I with Him conspire
 To grasp this sorry Scheme of Things entire,
 Would not we shatter it to bits—and then
 Re-mold it nearer to the Heart's Desire!

• • • • •

C

Yon rising Moon that looks for us again—
How oft hereafter will she wax and wane;
How oft hereafter rising look for us
Through this same Garden—and for one in vain!

CI

And when like her, oh Saki, you shall pass
Among the Guests Star-scatter'd on the Grass,
And in your joyous errand reach the spot
Where I made One—turn down an empty Glass!

TAMAM

SELECTED STORIES FROM GUJARAT

by

SARLA JAGMOHAN

If we are to have national integrity we must understand each other, and if people are to understand each other they must understand each other's cultural background. One of the most important means of understanding is to know each other's literature. With this aim in view, Jaico presents to you in this volume a selection of Gujarati short stories, selected and translated by Sarla Jagmohan. She brings to you a juicy selection that will entertain you, as well as give a glimpse of Gujarati culture.

Rs. 2.50

WOMEN BEHIND MAHATMA GANDHI

by

ELEANOR MORTON

In this book are presented graphic accounts of the women who played an important role in the life of Mahatma Gandhi, in a simple, interesting style. The author tells you about Putlibai Gandhi, Mahatma Gandhi's religious mother who preached Ahimsa, Kasturba, Annie Besant, Sarojini Naidu, Vijay Lakshmi Pandit, Miraben, Lady Mountbatten and many others.

Rs. 3.00

LOKAMANYA TILAK

(A Biography)

By

G. P. PRADHAN AND A. K. BHAGWAT

(With a Foreword by Dr. S. Radhakrishnan)

Incidents from Tilak's life, from his early activities, which had more to do with education than politics, to the great part he played in the National Movement, are depicted here in all their usefulness and detail. The authors have also been mindful of his literary achievements and his philosophy.

This prize-winning biography of Tilak is not an attempt at glorification but is a conducive and informative work.

"Compact and yet leaving no essential detail untold. . . ."

—Nagpur Times

"... a useful documentary of the incidents of Tilak's Life."

Free Press Journal

Paper-bound Edn.: Rs. 5.00

Cloth-bound: Rs. 7.50

J-142

JAWAHARLAL NEHRU

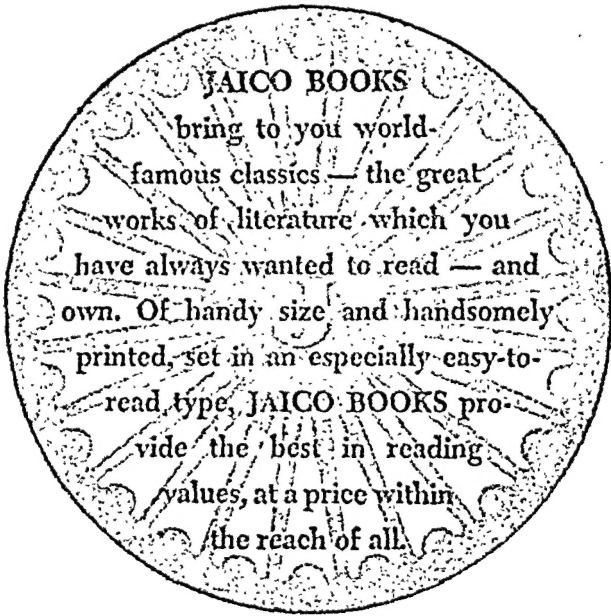

By

FRANK MORAES

Here is a book which you have long been desirous of possessing. Written by Mr. Frank Moraes, a well-known and distinguished name in the field of Journalism, this book satisfies a long-felt need for a good biography of our Prime Minister.

Fluently written, this biographical work is enlivened by the occasional glimpses of the family life of the Prime Minister. The controversial aspects of his personality are viewed through Indian eyes which makes it all the more interesting.

Price Rs. 4.00

JAICO BOOKS

bring to you world-
famous classics — the great works of literature which you have always wanted to read — and own. Of handy size and handsomely printed, set in an especially easy-to-read type, JAICO BOOKS provide the best in reading values, at a price within the reach of all.

